THE ARMY AND NAVY HONORED AT WHITE HOUSE RECEPTION.

The German Embassy Dance - Other Splendid Hospitalities - Dinners and Receptions-Personals.

The stars and stripes and the men who have fought on land and sea under the flag of their country were in evidence last night at the White House. The last card reception of the winter honored the officers of the army and navy and closed the season's official hospitalities with a wave of patriotic feeling in which everybody most heartily joined. The President's good luck in the way of weather was a happy element also in the success of the reception, as from most unpropitious conditions of the early day, a pleasant night followed. The attendance was large, and appeared with the success of the reception, as from most unpropitious conditions of the early day, a pleasant night followed. The attendance was large, and appeared the success of the reception, as from most unpropitious conditions of the early day, a pleasant night followed. even more so, since, as far as possible, the guests were hurried away from the cold front entrance to the inner corridor, where a double line was formed, instead of the one line of former occasions, through the west hall. This arrangement kept the crowd within chatting distance and gave plenty opportunities for seeing each other The last of the incoming line passed the receiving party at a quarter before 11.

The President and Mrs. Roosevelt, with the members of the cabinet and ladies and a few other guests, promenading through the rooms before going upstairs.

The decorations of the east room were most elaborate. Each window was draped most elaborate. Each window was draped with the national colors; a canopy effect was formed by the looping of four large flags from the central chandelier, and the pillars were wound with flags and garlanded with smilax ropes. Bright blossoms banked the mantles and crowned the doorways. In the corridor the flags of the President, the admiral of the navy and of the heads of the War and Navy departments were conspicuous ornaments.

President and Mrs. Roosevelt had receiving with them in the line Mrs. Root Mrs.

ing with them in the line Mrs. Root, Mrs. Knox, Mrs. Payne and Mrs. Hitchcock. Coming down stairs Secretary Long escorted Miss Carow, sister of Mrs. Roosevelt.

Miss Roosevelt and the cabinet girls made an attractive group at the end of the procession, which was headed by Colonel Bing-ham and Commander Cowles, Major Gilmore and Major McCawley and other of-

Mrs. Roosevelt seems to be keeping her richest toilets for the close of the season. She was particularly well dressed last night, and the blue in her gown brought a pretty color to her cheeks. Her dress was of white net dotted with silver spangles and blue chenille. It was made over white satin, and from belt to hem fell broad stripes of turquoise panne velvet, giving the lace the effect of being in panels. The velvet bands came up to the shoulders. A blue aigrette and her diamond necklace completed this dainty and highly becoming toilet. Mrs. Root was in white lace with silver spangles and touches of pink, Mrs. Knox rose brocaded satin and lace, Mrs. Payne white brocade with black lace and silver-spangled trimming, and Mrs. Hitch-cock white satin and pearl passementeries. Those invited to the blue room, besides the cabinet and the Supreme Court families, were the secretary to the President, Mrs. Cortelyou, Miss Hinds, Miss Fenimore, Mr. and Mrs. Loeb, Col. Theo. A. Bromfield and Mrs. Brom-Mr. and Mrs. George Vanderbilt were objects of a great deal of attention after their identity became known. They went from room to room and promenaded through the conservatories and enjoyed the reception from every possible point of view. The mistress of Biltmore, the Vanderbilt estate in North Carolina, is a very pretty young woman, with slight figure and dark hair. Her dress was of white brocaded satin with three deep insertions of point lace crossing the front of the skirt. A diamond and ruby ornament, fully six inches in circumference flashed in her corsage, and from it was looped a long neckchain, of small diamonds set in gold. For a far different reason the young Japanese girl, Miss Koto, who accompanied the Japanese minister and Mrs. Takahira, was another center of attraction. Miss Koto appeared in her native dress and had a chrysanthemum ribbon rosette in her shining black hair. Mrs. Takahira, in con-

a french gown of pare pink satin and lace, a diamond necklace and a diamond-tipped aigrette in her hair.

The entrance of the German ambassador, escorting the officers of the German ship Moltke, was another pleasant incident of the reception.

As both retired and active officers were

As both retired and active officers were As both retired and active officers were included in the invitation list, the army, navy and marine corps enjoyed a regular family reunion in the home of their commander-in-chief. The enjoyment of the young officers of the cavalry regiment at Fort Myer, just back from Cuba, was thorough, most of them participating in the scene for the first time. General and Mrs. Miles were so late arriving that it gave time for much specula-tion as to whether they would come or not. Their reception by the President and subsequent tour of the entire house was all the more watched in consequence.

Rear Admiral Robley D. Evans was among the first of the naval heroes to pass

A feature of the reception was the assembling of members of the Gridfron Club, with President Robert J. Wynne at their head, and passing along in a body to greet the President. Mr. Wynne was accompanied by his wife and daughter and Miss Charles, and followed by General Boynton and ladles of his family.

Mrs. Miles wore blue velvet, with crystal spangles; Mrs. Thomas F. Walsh, white lace, with medaillons of Irish point; Mrs. Davis, wife of Commander Davis, blue brocade and point lace; Mrs. A. E. Bates, black cade and point lace; Mrs. A. E. Bates, black lace, with stripes of silver spangles; Miss LITTLE HOPE OF RECOVERY.

Physicians Discouraged Over Condition of Mrs. Dennis. Mrs. Ada Gilbert Dennis, the victim of the mysterious assault committed more than two months ago, was reported today as holding her own. Dr. Atkinson visited her about noon today as usual. He could find no evidence of a change in the condition of the patient during the past few days. Mrs. Dennis is still unconscious and her condition gives the physician but little hope of recovery.

Detective Hartigan, who with Detective Horne, has been working on the case, re-turned home last night from a trip to Texas. He went there to make an investigation concerning Samuel C. Presiey, who committed suicide and whose name was mentioned in connection with the Dennis case. Detective Hartigan failed to find anythis. thing which would in any way indicate that Presley was a man calculated to commit crime. Presley was, it is said, a participant in a shooting affray on one occasion, but then, it is said, he was forced to the wall, and his weapon was used in self-defense. The investigation made by Detective Hartigan has resulted in putting Presley out of the case entirely and the detectives will have to look to others upon whom to fix have to look to others upon whom to fix the crime.

Interest in the case of the cripple shoc-maker, John Wesley Hall, colored, who was murdered here several years ago, has been revived by the case now under investigation. The circumstances of the two crimes were similar in some respects, with the exception that Hall was mur-dered outright, while Mrs. Dennis lived to discuss the assault made upon her. Unfortunately in her case the blow which rendered her unconscious was delicated. rendered her unconscious was delivered while she was asleep, and she probably never saw the person who struck her. Hall put up a desperate fight for his life. He was dead when found and his murderer left no clue.

During the past twenty-five years several persons charged with murder managed to elude the police, but the Hall case was the only one in which the mystery was un-
